By Thetis' tinseled slipper'd feet,
And the songs of Irens sweet. Milton.
2. Any thing shining with false lustre; any thing showy and of little value.
For favours cheap and common who would strive;
Yet scatter'd here and there I some behold,
Who can discern the tinseled from the gold? Dryden.
If the man will too curiously examine the superficial tinseled good, he undecieves himself to his own cost. Norris.
No glittering tinseled of May fair,
Could with this rod of Sid compare. Swift.
Ye tinseled inkles, whom a court maintains,
That count your beauties only by your stains,
Spin all your cobwebs o'er the eyes of day,
The music's wing shall brush you all away. Pope.
To TINSEL, v. a. [from the noun.] To decorate with cheap ornaments; to adorn with lustre that has no value.
Hence you phantastick potstillers in song,
My text delects your art, 'tis nature's tongue,
Scorns all her tinseled metaphors of self,
Illustrated by nothing but herself. Cleaveland.
She, tinseled o'er in robes of varying hues,
With self-applause her wild creation views,
Sees momentary monst'ers rise and fall,
And with her own fool's colours gilds them all. Pope.
TINT, n. f. [trinte, Fr., tinta, Ital.] A dye; a colour.
